

Jason Brailow Presents Remarkable Presales Numbers for His Latest Real Estate Development

LOS ANGELES, CA –After just two weeks from initiating the construction of his latest real estate venture, Jason Brailow announced the success of his project. The serial entrepreneur revealed that he has presold 30% of his 56 home sites, or 16 homes. Built in California, an hour away from Santa Barbara, Brailow's real estate project promotes sustainable living through solar-powered, smart homes ranging from 3,300 to 6,000 SQF. Priced between $1,100,000.00 up to $2,500,000.00, the units are built according to eight different plans and feature a variety of amenities exclusive to each plan.

Commenting on the rising popularity of his unique master-planned community, Brailow said, "The construction phase is going as planned, but I must admit that I didn't expect remarkable sales so quickly, especially since I had announced the project less than three months ago. However, I wouldn't call this a surprise since my team and I have been invested in this project from day one, working to ensure its success long before setting up the homes' foundation."

In addition to attracting potential buyers, Brailow's real estate development has caught the attention of renowned real estate investors. Jason Brailow shared that Million Dollar Listing's star Josh Altman has shown interest in his venture, proposing to take over the listings for the remaining development. "The attention this project has received in such a short period is quite exciting," he said. "I have received numerous offers, especially from renowned real estate agents and investors who would like to be part of this venture. Not only does this prove individuals' enthusiasm for embracing environmentally sustainable living, but it may also initiate a new trend in construction and real estate."

A known trendsetter in the fields of direct marketing and business start-ups, Brailow channeled his creativity while planning his exclusive, gated community. Designed to provide luxury accommodations for retirees and busy professionals who want to unwind, the property features cutting edge technology, especially when it comes to security. Homeowners can control their homes remotely via computer, Smartphone or tablet and receive messages if the integrated sensors and detectors detect changed around the house. Complementing homes' features are plenty of amenities, including a modern Club House, a fully-equipped gym and fitness center, a built-in barbeque area, and a resort pool.

Though real estate is far from related to his expertise in direct marketing, designing internet campaign and consulting for multi-national organizations, Jason Brailow has managed to establish his name in this highly competitive industry. The founder, chairman and CEO of Advanced Global Concepts, a Dubai-based consulting company, channels over a decade of experience in boosting clients' sales, building positive online reputations, and finding solutions for hurdles affecting the growth of a company or preventing it from achieving international success. However, when he is not at Dubai's exquisite Burj Khalifa or observing the construction of his real estate project in California, he invests his time optimizing his new Bitcoin platform or drafting plans for a new business venture.